INFANT/MATERNAL HEALTH

Healthy mothers mean healthy babies. Improving maternal health is one of the World Health Organization's key priorities. Access to quality post-natal care gives mothers an important start with their new babies. A wellness checkup (#303) by a qualified health practitioner will give more infants the chance to grow up healthy and happy.

Vital to a person's identity, a birth certificate (#304) is needed to access education, medical care and government services. The absence of a legal record of birth leaves children vulnerable to neglect, abuse and human trafficking. For adults, a record of birth is needed to open a bank account, obtain a passport, and vote. Many parents and guardians living in poverty cannot afford to provide their children with a birth certificate. With this gift, you can show a child that they belong, and are a member of their community and country.

WATER FOR LIFE

How many times a day do you use water? Did you brush your teeth, take a shower, or make a cup of coffee today?

Millions of people in the developing world plan their entire day around how much (or how little) water they have access to. Recently, a bore hole well was drilled at De Paul School in Mbinga, Tanzania, and as the well was drilled, water gushed out and the children began to cheer. Their previous water source was mountain-top dependent and pipes would often break, leading to a lack of water for the school.

A gift of a water system (#603) (or a share in one) or a water tank (#607) will help provide sustainable water solutions to entire communities.
